

“..with lovingkindness have I drawn thee.” Jer. 31:3

(note: the verse refers to being drawn by oxen, but was the inspiration for the idea of being drawn by hand / Mind)

It doesn't matter how often it is said

$2 + 2 = 5$,

It doesn't matter now many people believe it,

$2 + 2 = 5$;

You know the right answer, and cannot be swayed from it. 4.0000001 will not do.

$2 + 2 = 4$.

No less and no more.

The right answer never affected by the wrong.

$2 + 2 = 4$ does not need healing.

All it needs is knowing.

Forever there.

The dark in the cellar had been there for years,

Undisturbed for generations,

It could not get any darker.

In the cellar was a painting.

It was a masterpiece, outstandingly beautiful,

The darkness, having no substance, had never touched it.

It did not know it was in a dark cellar, nor that it had been dark and unseen for so many years.

When the light was turned on, the depth and years of effective night were irrelevant.

The darkness simply disappeared, like a wrong answer.

It had no power over the light, or the painting, and vanished.

Love blew away the dust, and gently wiped the surface clean.

The inherent beauty of the painting was revealed, like the beauty of a right answer.

It was as the painter had painted, the original now evident, as the artist still envisaged.

Forever there, untouched.

My Father speaks:

“.. with lovingkindness have I drawn thee”

Perfectly conceived in His Mind's eye,

Meticulously drawn with the outreach of Love,

Enscribed on the Spirit-paper of purity,

And embossed with Soul,

I am even now as God drew me,

No less and no more,

$2 + 2 = 4$.

The Christ sheds infinite light on the masterpiece of perfect thought that is me,

Takes my right hand as gently as the kiss of dawn and whispers across eternity;

“Know and feel this lovingkindness of the Father,

For God is Love and Love has drawn thee, Love leads thee.

You are borne of My Light, you shine as My Day.”

The unfettered glory of the one Christ illumines my life, illumines All.

I see and know everything: there is no concept of darkness. It does not exist.

I shine with the lovingkindness drawn of the Father.

Always beautiful:

God and man = 1.

FOREVER.
